WIDOW OF NEW LENOX CIVIL WAR VETERAN DIES

Mrs. Zilpha Post, aged 86 years, widow of the late Emory Post, Civil War veteran, died March 16th in the Soldiers Widows Home in Wilmington.

Mrs. Post was a resident of New Lenox for many years and entered the Soldiers Widows Home about 20 years ago. Mr. and Mrs. Post resided in a little cottage located along the Lincoln Highway in New Lenox for many years. The little cottage still stands, but has not been occupied for a long time.

Mr. Post was a painter by trade and was engaged in this work until ill health forced his retirement. He passed away in 1913.

Mr. and Mrs. Post were married in Monmouth, Illinois and located in New Lenox shortly after their marriage.

The deceased is survived by one brother, George W. Lanfear of Marinette, Wis., two nieces, Julia Franco of Calumet City and Mrs. Herbert Dennison of Grand Rapids, Michigan.

Funeral services were held Tuesday afternoon from the Wunderlich Funeral Home in Joliet with Rev. W. C. Christians officiating. Interment was made in the Maplewood cemetery in New Lenox.

FRANKFORT LIONS ENJOY SHOW AT JOLIET HIGH

The program was excellent and was thoroughly enjoyed.

Two of Frankfort's legal lights, Judge J. C. Knight and attorney A. H. Krusemark, Sr., and the editor had the distinction of having choice seats in "bald head row" right in front of the stage.

Mokena Wins 1st and Orland 2nd Place In Tournament

Mokena's invitation tournament played March 12 through March 15 and Orland's husky purple team breezed past Manhattan's small smooth passing aggregation. In the first round, there was a score of 41-26. Manhattan played without the services of their star forward, Norman Voss, out with the measles. This game was practically a repetition of the one played at Manhattan a few days earlier.

Orland's superior height and smooth-operating zone defense was just too much for their blue-clad opponents. These two easy games against Manhattan and an earlier win over Mokena probably resulted in a bit of overconfidence on the part of the Orange-a-tans, in their final tournament game with Mokena.

After getting off to a very fast start following Mokena's opening free throw Orland showed a noticeable lack of concern about the outcome of the game. It was the same desperate determination shown by Mokena, which proved the final undoing of the purple. Chuck Maddox gave his team an arousing start at the beginning of the game with 5 points. However, Orland's usually alert zone defense failed to close up holes with its usually good speed and gave the cat-like Mokena forwards a split second leave for their deadeye passes. Orland's fight of recent games was clearly missing and Mokena needed no second invitation to take the scoring opportunities.

The green-clad team had obviously the long dreamed of championship and were not to be denied. They certainly deserved their victory, and Orland admired the brilliant fighting game which won for them the coveted first place trophy. Bill Maddox and Mose Uthe turned in their usual fine game at guard positions, and both fired several shots at the basket which would have normally gone in. Norman Jorgensen turned in one of his best games of the season, covering his zone capably and making 3 baskets. Bob Hewson's love of basketball and long hours of outdoor practice were rewarded with the individual medal for the highest scorer in the tournament. Milton Francis saw action during the last few minutes of play.

Former Mokena Girl Training To Be A Flier

Enrolled in the primary CAA civil pilot training program, Miss Eleanor Hall, daughter of Mrs. J. V. Hall, 67 North Eastern Ave., Joliet, both formerly of Mokena, has been attending ground school for the last two weeks at Cornell College, Mt. Vernon, Iowa where she is a student.

Her studies in the ground school course include meteorology and navigation and instruction in the civil air regulations. She will begin actual flight training some time this week, depending on weather conditions.

Miss Hall is a senior at Cornell, and is majoring in English. An outstanding student, she was recently elected to Phi Beta Kappa. She is one of the two girls in the CAA course.

SEEKS NEEDED REPAIRS ON GRAVEL ROAD

In an effort to secure much needed repairs on the gravel road running west of Mokena, L. G. Bruder has sent the following letter to both the Frankfort township supervisor and the Will County Supt. of Highways:

Mr. Glen Fletcher, Supt. of Highways, Joliet, Illinois.

Mr. William Kampe, Supervisor Frankfort Township, Frankfort, Ill. Gentlemen:

In the interest of public welfare, it is your duty as public officials, to inspect the highway that runs west from Mokena, which is in a deplorable condition—nothing but a mass of holes. It is also your duty to see that this highway is repaired and put in good condition before some serious accidents happen.

The bridge on this highway needs repairing as someone has broken off the railing.

I hope that you will see to it and so does the public who use this highway that it is put in good condition within a short time.

Yours very truly,
L. G. BRUDER

Brother of Mokena Man Dies In Calif., Was Industrialist

Mr. Robert J. Schlacks of Mokena received a message last week telling of the death of his brother, Charles in a Pasadena, California hospital March 3rd, following a two weeks illness.

Charles Schlacks played an important part in the armament program of the first World War, being manager of the Eddystone plant of Midvale Steel and Ordnance Co., making guns and shells for the Allies. He remained in the East, being identified as executive or director of large corporations, but spent the winters in Pasadena. There he was highly respected for his keen intellect and charm and is deeply mourned by the winter colony friends in that city.

Interesting Career

The veteran industrialist was born in Chicago Nov. 12, 1865, the son of an official of the Illinois Central railroad. His first job was with his father's railroad. Later he was engaged as one of a group of Chicagoans to go abroad to study the Paris Exposition and thus help plan the Chicago World's Fair of the Nineties.

He was widely known in the railroad world, holding important positions as: assistant general manager of the Denver & Rio Grande; general manager, Colorado Midland, and later vice-president Denver & Rio Grande-Western Pacific system in charge of operations. For many years his headquarters were in Denver and San Francisco, where he has many admiring friends.

In 1914 he left the Western roads to become president of the Hale & Kilbourn Co., of Philadelphia and the following year took charge of the Midvale Steel plant. He remained to the time of his death, a director of this company, and also of the Badwin Locomotive Works, Barber Asphalt Co., American Pulley Co., Riverside Metals Co., Keystone Watch Case Co., and other corporations.

From 1919 to 1922 he was president of the Union Oil Co., of Delaware.

Mr. Schlacks was a member of many Clubs in the East and in California.

Mr. Robert Schlacks of Mokena, left immediately for Pasadena to assist his brother's widow in completing funeral arrangements.

The executive is survived by his widow, Mrs. Laura P. Schlacks, formerly of Denver; three brothers, Robert of Mokena, Joseph T. of Detroit and Edward of Denver; two sisters, Mrs. H. A. Geise of Chicago and Mrs. George Dostal of Berkeley.

Funeral services were held in Pasadena March 6th and the body was placed in a vault.

Death Takes Editor's Double

The editor was much surprised to read an obituary of William Semmler appearing in a fraternal magazine "Knight of St. George of McKees Rocks, Pa., recently; obituary read as follows:

William Semmler

Brother William Semmler, a member of Branch 20, who passed away to his eternal reward last month. Brother Semmler was a former Supreme Trustee and Director to many conventions, and supervised the building of the addition to the Home in 1927.

Branch 20 lost one of its good men last month. Brother William Semmler died on December 2nd from injuries incurred the preceding evening when he was struck by an automobile near his home. Brother Semmler was well known throughout the district for his cheerful and kind spirit. In McKees Rocks, where he lived, he had been in the building contracting business for over 45 years. Everyone, it seems, knew him, everyone admired and treasured his friendship. He was 77 when he died. May his soul, through the mercy of God, rest in peace.

SET MOKENA HOMECOMING DATES

The Mokena Civic Association at their meeting held Monday night in Hatch Hall, set the following dates for the annual Mokena Homecoming:

Sept. 19, 20 and 21st.

Various committees have been appointed and will begin formulating plans for the big event.

Arthur Shoop, chairman on the committee for the creation of a community high school, reported that owing to the present unsettled conditions of the country, the committee had found this an inopportune time to push the proposition. The committee was not disbanded and will continue to function.

The Memorial Day Committee headed by Wm. Semmler, is also preparing a program in which all the organizations in the community will be invited to participate.

Milton Geuther who is connected with the Federal Farm Security Service, gave a highly interesting and illuminating address on the work being done to help destitute farmers get on their feet again and keeping them off the relief rolls. He gave a very graphic account of the problems which have arisen in the Wilmington-Elwood area with the disposition of the farmers from many thousands of acres of farm land and which has created a new tax problem for Will County. With thousands of acres tax exempt, Will County is short $125,000 real estate tax and the county board is now seeking a Federal grant in place of this tax.

Mr. Geuther declared that the farmer families who have many children are really the big problem and it is difficult to find homes for them. The meeting was an entertaining and profitable one.

R. A. Bechtstein, local auditor, is to give a talk before the civic group at their April meeting.

From Sharecropper to Packing Magnate, Americans Work Hard for Their Living

By HOPE CHAMBERLIN
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

CHICAGO.—In most American homes, the "Mrs." holds the purse strings . . . less than 50 per cent of American houses have bath tubs . . .

The least amount of money that can sustain life is the three cents a day per person that the colored sharecroppers in Mississippi live on by eating flour and molasses in winter . . .

As much money is spent in ice cream and soft drinks as in building houses . . .

These and other down-to-earth facts are the findings revealed in "How America Lives," just off the presses of the Henry Holt publishing house. The full report on how Americans make their money—and spend it; what they eat, drink, wear and talk about; what gives them a kick; where the shoe pinches the most; and the least; what they dream of and what they believe in; and even what they do on Sunday afternoons was compiled by specialists who, after traveling to all parts of the nation during 1940, wrote the "How America Lives" series for The Ladies' Home Journal.

The 16 families range from that of Henry Bracey, Negro Mississippi sharecropper, whose cash income last year totaled $26, to the family of Thomas Wilson, millionaire head of the Wilson Packing company of Chicago.

Summary of Study.

And here's a summary of the study which was conducted in the homes of real, warm, typical Americans:

As against the 1940 U. S. census statement that $22 a week is the salary of the average man in America, the survey disclosed that a man with a family of two children needs to earn at least $35 a week before he can own his own home, carry insurance, and give his children welcome advantages. And he can do this only

How America Lives . . . "What shall I wear?" It's the daily question of a whole nation of women who have made up their minds that they want to look pretty and stay young. And so America is giving them what they want . . . at the price they want to pay. They can buy a unique value in a simple felt hat, for example, for about $5, or even $3.95, and know they are getting quality!

if there is no sickness and if he has saved up an initial lump sum for the down payment on his house.

Dream of all American families is to own a home. Chief hurdle is saving up down payment.

Low points in American living are American houses—expensive and expensive. Although $3,000,000,000 annually goes into new homes, less than 40 per cent of the houses in America are in good condition. More than 80 per cent were built without help from architects. Functionally they are inadequate. Aesthetically, they are unfortunate. They lack enough closet space; they are hard to heat; the roof leaks; and they are so poorly planned that the homeowner walks an extra hundred miles a year between the front door and the kitchen.

How America Lives . . . They spend as much on ice cream and soft drinks as on building houses. As a nation, they like to "eat well," and, particularly in these times, do eat better than any other family in the world. The average city family spends one-third of its annual income, or $508, a year for food. It thrives on good plain cooking—three square meals a day. Few families keep accurate food budgets. They don't need to—the women are thrifty shoppers.

Kitchens Best Equipped.

High points in American living are American kitchens—best equipped, most modern and most used room in the house. Living room is shabbiest, dining room barest and least used.

Ninety-five per cent of the women in America employ no household help. Average American homemaker's week (in home where there are growing children) runs 50 to 60 hours—and 24 hours a day, seven days a week she is "on call" when the children are little. (Grandmother's hours were nearly a hundred!) American boys and girls still help with the chores, even if they live in city apartments.

The typical American family's credit is good. Majority of families "pay as they go," after saving with a particular goal in view. Installment buying records show 98½ per cent fulfill their payments. Foreclosures in FHA mortgages over five years have amounted to less than half of 1 per cent.

Largest single item of American families' yearly spending is food—14 billions, or 28 per cent of the national income. Conclusive proof that America as a whole sets a good table is the fact that the average city family spends one-third of its annual income for food. Ten dollars a week feeds a family of four adequately, but without many frills. It can be done for less . . . a Cedar Rapids, Iowa, woman's food budget was $7 a week for four people.

Food Budget 'Touchy.'

Toughest subject among American homemakers is the food budget, about which they become more defensive and passionate than about a national presidential election.

American homemakers have been made acutely vitamin conscious. Per capita consumption of vegetables, other than potatoes, has increased from 26.36 pounds in 1919-20 to 1923-24 to 31.36 pounds in 1934-35. Production and shipment of oranges jumped from 10 million boxes in 1900 to 55 million in 1935.

The big Sunday dinner is passing. More and more families go on automobile outings instead. Saturday night dinner has replaced Sunday noon as the big dinner of the week.

Gingerbread and baked beans are still America's number one choice; beef, number one meat; apple pie and chocolate cake, number one desserts.

When the pinch comes, American families economize on clothes first. But American women love clothes and have a vast choice in inexpensive styles (48 million felt hats in the $3.95 to $5 quality were sold last year.) There is no more Main Street of fashion.

Fashion a Fault?

American women's chief fashion fault—doing a good thing to death. If veiling is the fashion, they lose themselves in the mists. If open toes are in style, they go for the most extreme and open styles—and wear them every hour of the day and night. They pile on too much junk jewelry . . . lack co-ordinating powers when shopping for clothes.

Two permanents a year, averaging from $3 to $5 are fixed charges in the budget, although weekly trips to the beauty shop are usually supplanted by the home shampoo and bobby pin method.

America is reappraising itself . . . taken as a whole—some 30 million

How America Lives . . . What does Mrs. America do on an average day? She has no help with her housework. (95 per cent of American women don't.) Then it's likely she's up at 7 a. m., and the light in her kitchen window will be shining long after sundown. She gets the meals, washes the dishes, cleans the house, markets, irons and mends, to mention but a few of the deeds which require 60 or more of her weekly hours.

families—America lives pretty well. There's room for improvement, yes. That, like the new vacuum cleaner, another pair of shoes for sis or an addition to the house, will come.

Real 'Boom Town' Rises in Wasteland

HOLLY RIDGE, N. C. — Four months ago you could have bought all the land you wanted around here for three or four dollars an acre—unless you happened to be dealing with a native whose conscience would not allow him to accept such an exorbitant price. Today this same land is being sold in 20 foot lots and for serious money, too.

No, nobody has discovered oil in these parts. This just happens to be the place the federal government picked for the army's new anti-aircraft training camp, now under construction.

There is good farm land both to the north and south of Holly Ridge but the real estate in this immediate vicinity is little more than a scrub-timbered waste. But the U. S. army had other ideas. The section is not only easily accessible by highway and railroad, but offers an ideal spot over which to shoot anti-aircraft guns without danger of hitting anyone on land or sea. The shape of the coast and the lay of the land is well suited to the army's purpose. Guns will fire out into Onslow bay, wide coastal indenture many miles from the lanes of coastwise shipping.

Naturally the government didn't suffer from Holly Ridge's new land boom. In the first place, the price didn't rise until the army had acted and, in the second, the government has the right of condemnation. So its two-mile frontage on U. S. highway No. 17 and all the territory between here and the ocean came cheap enough. It's the land adjacent to the reservation that's suddenly become so valuable.

In November the entire population of the cross roads of Holly Ridge and for a mile in every direction totaled 28. This summer, according to government plans, there will be 20,000 troops stationed here. Already there are several thousand men building the camp and the trailer camps in which many of them live stretch up and down the highway for miles. Pine plank stores and bunk houses spring up over night and business is booming on every hand.

How long it all will last nobody knows.

Explosives for defense held up by nitrate shortage . . . British warplanes use larger cannon than generally realized.
(Bell Syndicate—WNU Service.)

WASHINGTON.—A visitor from Mars, studying war and anti-war hysteria in the United States today, might have some startling observations to make.

He would certainly report, in his letters to the folks back on Mars, that the people of the good old U. S. A. and its government as well were very stupid in permitting extraneous issues to hold up their preparations to defend themselves against attack.

He would be mystified, for example, when he found out that the No. 1 essential for warfare—explosives—was being held up by a controversy over government ownership! And not government ownership NOW, but the possibility of government ownership AFTER the war!

It so happens that explosives, according to army and navy experts, are lagging way behind airplanes, ships and even tanks. Everybody has known this for a long time, as a matter of fact ever since the war in Europe broke out. Democracies move slowly, we are told, and there was little hurry to do anything about it.

MODERNIZE MUSCLE SHOALS

But recently the government decided to do something about that old-fashioned nitrate plant at Muscle Shoals. Everyone knew the processes for which that plant was intended were obsolete, but it seemed a simple matter to bring them up to date. It was, but it could be done only with materials the duPonts could supply, if it were to be done quickly. The duPonts were eager to help, BUT—they wanted assurances that after the war was over the government would not use the duPont's own devices to produce cheap nitrates for fertilizers, and thus compete with the duPont's own fertilizer business.

But no! The government had no idea of giving any such assurances. It wanted the duPonts to furnish the very elements the government has needed, all these years, to go into competition with the duPonts.

So that particular supply of nitrates for explosives was held up. The new machinery to modernize the Muscle Shoals plant is now "on order."

Then there is another case which would puzzle our Martian visitor. For airplanes aluminum is of the essence. The O. P. M. has just issued priorities to restrict other than military uses of this metal. The day after those orders were issued Harold Ickes told reporters he had declined an offer from the Aluminum company to install another plant near Bonneville. His reason—that if the aluminum company took any more power from Bonneville than already negotiated for, there might not be enough for municipalities desiring public ownership plants!

Wonder what our Martian would think about that!

British Planes Carry Large Cannon

To anyone who has ridden in an airplane, the notion of shooting a cannon from one conjures up all sorts of horrible possibilities. Perhaps very few people for that reason realize the size of the cannon actually in use by the British in airplane fighting. The newer fighting planes made in the United States for the British must of course be equipped to carry these guns.

Actually the cannon used by the British so far are of 37-millimeter caliber. That means that the diameter of the projectile is approximately 1½ inches.

Thus the shell fired by a 37-millimeter cannon from an airplane is nearly five times the diameter of the rifle or machine-gun bullet.

EXPERIMENT WITH '75'

It is still more impressive to realize that this cannon is almost half the size of the favorite fieldpiece of the French army, the famous "75." Actually, our own army has fired a 75-millimeter gun from an airplane.

Incidentally, while no official announcement has been made that the army plans using 75s in airplanes as a regular practice, there was of course no earthly point in making the experiment if the ordnance officers did not have that in mind. Some of the bigger of the new airplanes, it is estimated, could be equipped with them to advantage, and probably are being so equipped.

It is also assured here, by experts, though there has been no announcement from London on this point either, that the new big British fighters are being equipped with 75s.

Obviously this sort of information is a military secret of the deepest nature, never to be disclosed until the full advantage of its surprise nature has been attained in actual fighting.

Artificial Ear Now a Valuable Aid to Hearing

By DR. JAMES W. BARTON
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

THE wearing of glasses to bring vision within normal limits is now so common, one is surprised to find anyone with an eye defect who is unwilling to wear them. Of course, there are some, such as actors or actresses, to whom facial expression is so important, who can be excused for not wanting to wear glasses. The use of contact lenses gives good vision without hiding or shading the face.

For years many hard of hearing individuals have been going without hearing aids despite the fact that the new methods of discovering the amount and kind of hearing lacking now make it possible to fit hearing aids just as eye glasses are fitted. For those with a special type of hard of hearing who will not wear hearing aids, a late invention may be of interest.

A Swiss physician, Dr. Madoleczny-Miloud, in the Swiss

Medical Journal, states that an artificial ear drum is now in use in cases where there are defects in the ear drum or where hearing in both ears has been lost following operation or injury. It is hardly ever used where there is hearing in one ear.

While the artificial ear drum has some disadvantages in that it must be fitted and sometimes refitted by the ear specialist, nevertheless it has many advantages. It is not visible from the outside and causes no distortion or changes in sound.

Effects Personality.

A most important point is the effect upon the patient's personality in having such a hearing help or aid that cannot be seen by others. "It overcomes all self-consciousness because it makes strings and technical devices unnecessary. The patient has no difficulty in keeping up the conversation in a small group if the artificial drum fits well. The ability to hear everyday noises has a beneficial effect upon the mind."

These ear drums are being made of tin foil and cellophane.

Remember, these artificial ear drums are used only where the ear drums have been damaged, where ear is dry and scars are present.

Noise No 'Nuisance' But Health Problem

MORE and more we are learning of the damage to health by noise. Formerly noise was considered just a nuisance, but today it is known to be a real health problem.

The protection of workmen from the effects of sound is possible by the use of substances which isolate or keep the vibrations away, by wearing boots with soft soles, and by using straw mats, felt braids and special chairs with springs, and when possible giving "rest" periods from the noise.

However, as it is definitely known that noise interferes with working ability, employers themselves are now doing all they can to lessen noise in their establishments. In the National Industrial Review, Dr. G. H. Ferguson, Ottawa, chief, Public Engineering Division, states that it is well to bear in mind that, from the economical point of view, noise, even though of slight intensity, causes a marked decrease of output which may fall as low as to 40 per cent of the normal and an increase in labor turnover, which in turn means a decrease in production.

Getting rid of noise will be profitable to all concerned; to the workers because it improves their health and their enthusiasm, lessens absence from work, and lessens friction between employers and employees, and to employers because it increases output and lessens cost of production.

Noise damages health because it causes constant tenseness of mind and body. Noise strikes the ear and thus the brain. The brain sends out impulses to nerves and muscles and they continue "tensed," always ready to "spring."

Tenseness causes tiredness and tiredness lessens mental and physical ability.

QUESTION BOX

Q. What can be the cause of a constant pain in stomach? What causes my skin to itch over my entire body? I will appreciate your advice.

A.—Any constant pain in pit of stomach should be investigated. While most of these pains are due to gas from sluggish liver and gall bladder there may be a growth. A general itching of body is usually due to some general condition such as diabetes, or sensitiveness to foods.

Watch Your Kidneys!

Help Them Cleanse the Blood of Harmful Body Waste

Your kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. But kidneys sometimes lag in their work—do not act as Nature intended—fail to remove impurities that, if retained, may poison the system and upset the whole body machinery. Symptoms may be nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—a feeling of nervous anxiety and loss of pep and strength. Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination. There should be no doubt that prompt treatment is wiser than neglect. Use Doan's Pills. Government Defines Proper Use of Flag in Commerce

WASHINGTON.—The American flag can't be displayed promiscuously without violating the law even though it represents the "land of the free." To explain and clarify legal restrictions in connection with the use of the flag for advertising or other commercial purposes, the department of commerce has published a new handbook entitled, "The Flag of the United States—Its Use in Commerce."

Numerous instances have been reported to the department of commerce of the questionable employment of the national emblem for commercial purposes. In most cases the violation of the law was done unwittingly.

While there is no federal legislation covering the use of the flag, every state in the Union has passed laws prohibiting its use for advertising purposes. Similar laws appear on the statute books of Alaska, Puerto Rico and Samoa.

THE SMOKY YEARS

By ALAN LE MAY

W.N.U. Release

INSTALLMENT 2 THE STORY SO FAR:

Dusty King and Lew Gordon were joint owners of the vast King-Gordon range which stretched from Texas to Montana. When building up this string of ranches, they continually had to fight the unscrupulous Ben Thorpe. Thorpe rivaled King-Gordon in power.

CHAPTER II

An hour spent in the Wells Fargo office with the deputy commissioner, filling out forms, signing papers, ended as Dusty King and Bill Roper stood with Lew Gordon on the board walk. It was the first time the three had had a word alone since the Crying Wolf had passed into the hands of King-Gordon.

"Well," said Dusty King, "we got her."

"Maybe," Gordon said, "this is our chance. Maybe now we can get the cow business on a sound basis, here in the north, and have some order, and decent law."

"You'll never get a 'sound basis' until Ben Thorpe is bust," Dusty said. "What law enforcement we got in the West is rotten through and through with office holders that Thorpe owns."

"Some day," Gordon said slowly, "Ben Thorpe has got to go."

"Some day? Lew, we've got him beat!"

King's exuberant mood of victory was not to be dampened. "You want law and order?" he chortled. "We'll show 'em law and order!"

"That puts me in mind," said Gordon. "A feller passed me this here to give to you."

He handed Dusty King a little twisted scrap of paper, torn off the corner of something else. Dusty untangled it, looked at it a moment, showed it to the others. Five words were penciled on it in sprawling black letters:

IN GOD'S NAME LOOK OUT

"Who's this from, Lew?"

Gordon's lips moved almost soundlessly. "Dry Camp Pierce."

Roper knew that name, without knowing what lengths of outlawry had brought Dry Camp Pierce to where he was today. Rewards backed by Ben Thorpe were on Dry Camp's scalp over half the West; probably it was as much as his life was worth to show himself in Ogallala now.

"This note—"

Dusty King tossed it off with a shrug. "Oh—I suppose Thorpe is getting drunk some place and spouting off about what all he's going to do to me when he catches up." Dusty's teeth showed in his infectious grin. "I suppose Dry Camp thought I ought to know about it."

"He's right Dusty," Lew Gordon said. "We do want to look out, all of us, all the time."

"We always had to look out," Dusty scoffed.

"It'll be the more so now. There isn't anything in the world Ben Thorpe's people will stop at, Dusty."

"Let 'em come on."

"We want to look out," Gordon said again.

"If you feel that way about it," said Dusty, "what was the idea of your working through that law we can't wear guns in town?"

Bill Roper said, "We could have brought it to an open shoot-out, five years ago—ten years ago. Better if we had."

Gordon shook his head. "Nothing ever gets fixed up with guns."

Dusty King pulled his hat a little more on one side so that he could wink at Bill Roper unobserved. But he said, "He's partly right, Bill. Ben Thorpe isn't just one man any more. Walk Lasham—Cleve Tanner—any one of a dozen others could step into his shoes. It's a whole rotten organization has to be busted up."

"Ben Thorpe downed, and they'll quit," Bill Roper thought.

"Ben Thorpe down and it's only begun," Dusty countered. "Get it out of your head that you can fix anything up by downing Ben Thorpe. Not while this organization stands in one piece. Might be a good idea for you to remember that, Bill, in case anything happens."

"Dusty," Bill said, "if ever they get you, by God, I'll get Ben Thorpe if it's the last—"

"No," said Dusty. "You hear me? No. If they get me—you'll remember what I said. You remember you're fighting a thing, and a big one; not just one man." His face crinkled in that familiar, contagious grin. "Forget it! Dry Camp's spooky, that's all."

He hooked an arm through his partner's, and went swaggering off.

Ten paces down the walk he stopped, turned, and came back. He leaned close to Roper. "If anything should happen, kid—remember what I said."

CHAPTER III

That Lew Gordon had a daughter was not so surprising as that he had only one. Single-minded, he clung all his life to the memory of the wife he had lost when their first child was born.

Jody Gordon was twenty now. She didn't exactly run Lew Gordon; nobody did that. But it was fairly apparent that his stubborn bid for supremacy in western cattle was intended in her behalf, and without her would have been meaningless to him.

Because Gordon hadn't wanted his girl flitting around through the er and wealth, but he had gained his position through wholesale cattle rustling and gunplay. Their opposing interests came to a showdown when the Government announced the auctioning of the Crying Wolf land in Montana. Bill Roper, King's adopted son, press of Ben Thorpe's ruffians at the auction, getting his own boys into fights, Jody Gordon was waiting here for news of what had happened to the Crying Wolf. Bill Roper vaulted the foolish little picket gate, scuffed the mud off his boots on the high front steps, and let himself in. He sent a Comanche war gobbler ringing through the house, but Jody was already flying into the room.

"Did you get it? Did you get it?"

"All of it!"

Jody flung herself at him, and kissed him; so sweet, so vital, so completely feminine that he wanted to keep her close to him. But she broke away again as he tried to hold her.

"How much did it cost?"

"Seventy cents—gold."

Jody's breath caught. "Can we come out on it?"

"Sure we can come out on it. Not a cent less would've turned the trick. Dusty—"

Jody sat on a walnut table that had come all the way from St. Louis, and swung her feet. The story seemed to tickle her in more ways than one. "I can just see you all,"

But she broke away as he tried to hold her.

she said, "standing around making an impression on each other."

He turned from the window, and she was laughing at him as he had thought, her mouth smothered with her fingers.

"Come here a minute," he said, going toward her.

She twisted from the edge of the table, as if to put it between them, but she was too late. His rope-hard fingers caught her wrist, and held her as easily as if he had dallied a calf to the horn.

"Listen," he begged her. "Listen—"

He caught her up, clamped an arm behind her head, and kissed her hard. Hard, and for a long time.

So long as she was rigid in his arms, fighting him, he held her; but when she stood limp, neither yielding nor resisting, his arms relaxed, and Jody tore herself free.

She lashed out at him like a little mustang, striking him across the mouth. Her face was white, all that quick, irrepressible laughter gone, as for a moment she looked at him. A trickle of blood ran from Bill Roper's lips, and made a crooked mark on his chin. Then she turned and fled.

When she was gone Bill Roper stood still, sucking his cut lips. After a little while he went to the window, instinctively turning to open space for his answers.

He could remember Jody Gordon as a little tow-headed kid, before her hair had darkened into the elusive misty brown that it was now. Or as a colt-legged girl with scratches on her shins from riding bare-legged through the sage. Or as a peculiarly tempestuous, uncertain thing, neither child nor woman. But this latest phase he couldn't understand at all.

He picked up his hat, and for a little while stood turning it in his hands. Then he threw it in the corner, and went searching through the house.

Jody was in the tallest of the four foolish towers. From here you could see the town, and the slim, glittering line of the railroad, connecting these far plainsmen with a world hungry for beef.

Jody said matter-of-factly, "We've got to have more loading pens, Bill."

Bill's face broke into a slow grin. Abruptly he laid hard hands on disused sashes, and broke them open.

had inspected this territory and found it to contain an almost unbelievable wealth of grass. Bidding went high at the auction, but King beat out Thorpe to gain control of the land. This was a heavy blow to Thorpe who needed the pasture for his herds.

Into their little cubicle flowed the sweet air of the open prairie sweep, inspiring with the fresh smell of the new grass.

She said, "Tell me about your new job."

"It isn't new."

"They said that you'd be the new boss of the Crying Wolf, if we got it," Jody said.

For more years than he could remember, he had been working to take this opportunity—the chance to take two years, or three, with such-and-such cattle, on such-and-such land, and show that he could pay out on market deliveries in pounds of beef. But now—a million horns and hoofs didn't seem to mean so much.

Something was here—something that wasn't any place else—not on the long trail, not in the wild terminal towns. He knew now he had to tell her that, and he dreaded it, because she probably would think it was funny. He wouldn't look at her as he spoke, because he didn't want to see her laughing at him.

"I don't know as I'm so much interested as I was," he said.

"Why, Billy—not interested in the Crying Wolf—nearly five hundred square miles of feeder land! What's come over you?"

"I guess maybe I'm tired of riding alone," Bill said.

"Alone? With all the outfit you'll have—I wouldn't call it alone."

"I would. Grass country is lonely country," he said now, "as lonely as the dry plains. You get to wondering what the everlasting cattle add up to, in the course of a life. Then some night you know you don't care what they add up to; and you think, 'Damn fat beef!'"

"Why, Billy—why, Billy—"

"None of it means a damn, without you're there," he told her. "Working cattle doesn't mean anything, because you'll always have all the cattle you need anyway; and no long trail means anything, without you're at the end of it. I'm sick of long drive-trails, empty of you at the end."

There was a long, motionless silence; he kept his eyes on the far sand hills as presently she leaned forward to look up into his face.

"You really mean it, don't you?" Jody said.

Jody's words came very faint, and a little breathless.

"Why didn't you say so before?"

He looked at her then, and she wasn't laughing. In her eyes was a new, grave light, such as he had never seen; a warm light, a beloved light, better than sunset to a weary day-rider who has worked leather since before dawn. Timorously, but very willingly, she came into his arms; and he held her as if she were not only a very precious but a very fragile thing. For a little while it seemed that one trail, a trail longer than the Long Trail itself, had come to its end.

"Can't believe," he said at last, his lips in her hair, "you're sure-enough mine."

"All yours—all, all!"

They had one hour, there in the prairie lookout tower, discovering each other, getting acquainted as if for the first time. The sun went down in a gorgeous welter of color.

Jody shivered a little. "I wish Dad and Dusty would come. Especially Dusty."

"Why?"

"He has so many enemies. Some of them are dangerous as diamond-backs. It worries me when he's due and doesn't get back."

"Dusty'll take care of himself." Bill Roper chuckled, and held her closer.

One half hour more . . .

Up from the town came a crazy ridden horse, splashing mud eaves-high under the urge of spur and quirt.

"He'll lame his pony if he goes down in that slick," Bill commented. "Now what do you suppose—"

The rider tried to pull up in front of the house, and the frantic pony swerved and slid, mouth wide open to the sky. Its shoulder crashed the fence, taking down a dozen feet of pickets. The rider tumbled off, ran up the steps to hammer on the door.

Roper went clattering down the stairs, pulled open the door. "Now listen; you—"

"Bill—Dusty—Mr. King—he—"

Bill Roper froze, and there was a long moment of paralyzed silence. "Spit it out, man!" Roper shouted at him.

"Bill—he's daid!"

"Who—who—"

"Dusty King's daid! Bill, they gunned him—they gunned him down!"

"Who did?"

"Tain't known. Mr. Gordon's there; he—"

Bill Roper walked out past the cowboy stiffly, like a man gone blind. Without knowing what he did he walked down to the gate, and stood gripping the pickets with his two hands.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL Lesson

By HAROLD L. LUNDQUIST, D. D.
Dean of the Moody Bible Institute of Chicago.

JESUS CONDEMNED AND CRUCIFIED

LESSON TEXT—Luke 23:13-25, 32-34a.
GOLDEN TEXT—What shall I do then with Jesus which is called Christ?—Mat 27:22.

Two nights stand out in the story of the life of Christ, and therefore in the history of the world. The first was His first night on earth—that "silent night, holy night" of which we sing at Christmas, when He was born as the babe of Bethlehem. The other was His last night on earth. Except for the precious hour of fellowship in the upper room and His communion with the Father in the agony of Gethsemane, it was a night of darkness, denial, and betrayal.

There were six trials—or mock trials—of Jesus, three religious ones before Annas, then Caiaphas, and then again before the Sanhedrin; three political trials, before Pilate, then Herod, and Pilate again. At the close of this last trial before Pilate Jesus stands

I. Cleared by the Evidence (vv. 13-17).

At the first trial before him Pilate had declared on the basis of his examination that Jesus was "Not guilty" (v. 4). Herod, to whom He had been sent, had only played with Him (vv. 8-11). What a travesty! Now Pilate again presents Him to the people as having "no fault." It is a striking truth that no man of any age has ever been able honestly to point to any fault in the life or character of Jesus Christ. Think that over—unbeliever!

Now came Pilate's first step in the wrong direction. An accused man without guilt should be declared innocent and released. But Pilate feared the Jews who had already made trouble for him with Caesar. So he compromised and said he would chastise Jesus before releasing Him. John Morely was right when he said, "Under some circumstances compromise is the most immoral word in the English language." It gained Pilate nothing; in fact, it led to his next step downward.

II. Condemned Through Cowardice (vv. 18-25).

To avoid a disturbance and to keep the leaders from complaining to Caesar, Pilate gave Jesus into their hands with the "sentence that it should be as they required" (v. 24) when they cried "Crucify Him!"

Pilate was in a difficult place, but that does not excuse him. It is in the hard and trying place that a man should stand for the right, come what may. Too many of those who profess to follow Christ are afraid to stand up for Him in the hour when men deny Him. Some unbelievers are fearful about declaring their allegiance to Him, because they fear the opposition of men.

Where is our courage, our manliness? Have we lost the moral stamina of our pioneer forefathers, the religious conviction of our Christian fathers and mothers? Pilate was a coward, and we are ashamed of him. Let us not be cowardly and make Christ ashamed of us (read Matt. 10:32, 33).

III. Crucified with Malefactors (vv. 32-34a).

The details of and circumstances surrounding the crucifixion are of deep interest to every Christian. We stand with Luther and weep as we see Christ's unspeakable agony, not only of body but of spirit, and we cry as did Luther, "For me, for me!" How can any believer contemplate the cross and withhold self, substance, or service from Christ?

Equally earnest and heart-searching is the message of the cross to the unbeliever. He knows he is a sinner (Rom. 3:23); he knows that "the wages of sin is death" (Rom. 6:23); and he knows that "neither is there salvation in any other, for there is none other name whereby we must be saved" (Acts 4:12). Here at the cross he meets that one "who his own self bare our sins in his own body on the tree, that we, being dead to sins, should live unto righteousness: by whose stripes ye were healed" (1 Pet. 2:24).

There were two malefactors who were crucified with Him (v. 32), and one railed at Him. The other said, "Lord, remember me when thou comest into thy kingdom"; and Jesus said to him, "Today thou shalt be with me in paradise" (Luke 23:39-43). Unbeliever, will you not just now take the eternal life which Jesus died to make possible for you?

Loving His enemies to the last, our Lord prayed for the forgiveness of those who thus despitely used Him. What matchless grace! One wonders how many of them by repentance for their deeds made it possible for that prayer to be answered. That door of redemption stands open today for every one who up to now has crucified the Son of God afresh (Heb. 6:6) by sin and unbelief.

NEWS ITEM

By STANLEY CORDELL

(Associated Newspapers.)
WNU Service.

FROM the moment that young Kendall Bacon stepped into the cluttered editorial office of the Lansdowne Weekly Gazette, he knew he had tackled a man-sized job. The atmosphere of the place fairly reeked with listlessness.

A middle-aged man in shirt sleeves sat at a desk piled high with clippings and books and bottles of paste and pencil stubs. The man was reading galley proofs. He looked up as Kendall approached.

"I'm Kendall Bacon. Knight sent me down." Kendall spoke crisply.

"Oh." The man laid down his proof sheets. He looked at Kendall as much as to say, "So you're the bird the old man sent down to stir things up?"

Aloud he said, extending his hand, "Hello, Bacon. I'm Jules Allen, managing editor here. Have a chair."

Kendall didn't accept. His eyes roved about the room, finally returning to Allen's face.

"Well, we might as well get started. Sorry to be so abrupt, but you know why I'm here."

Allen looked at him ruefully. "The old man's letter said we weren't producing, said he was sending a man down to take over and build up the sheet."

"Right. I'm the man. Now, to begin with I want this office cleaned up. Right away. Everyone will work better in a clean atmosphere."

Allen was immediately resentful. "Remember this is a newspaper office, young fellow."

"Which is no excuse for it looking like a pig pen. That's story book stuff, and it's wrong!"

Allen started to speak, but Kendall moved away from him, ordered the stenographer, who had been listening, open-mouthed, to find a man and a broom at once. Then he turned back to Allen. "From now on, Allen, I'm boss. And get that hostile look off your face or you'll find yourself looking for a job." He paused, and presently sat down.

"From now on, Allen, I'm boss. And get that hostile look off your face or you'll find yourself looking for a job."

"First I want to run through your files. No, don't go into a long explanation of what's wrong. I know. Your lineage is dropping off because your advertisers aren't getting results, and your advertisers aren't getting results because your circulation is dropping off. Your circulation is dropping off because you're not getting news, and that's your fault!"

"Say!" Allen's face was red.

"Listen, youngster, I've been in the news game twenty years. You can't tell me how to run a paper. You can't write news when—"

"I know, I know," Kendall interrupted briskly. "The town's dead! There isn't any news. Competition from the dailies. Sure, sure. Same old story. I hear it everywhere. Can't tell old-timers like yourself anything."

Allen was mad. No one had ever talked to him like that and got away with it. And yet, despite the youth's insolence, the managing editor somehow liked him. Something about the boy's sure-fire attitude inspired confidence. Old Man Knight rarely made a mistake in his men.

Kendall had picked up a proof sheet and was reading aloud.

"Miss Agatha Drake visited in Saysbrook recently! . . . 'Caleb Rollins is having his house painted' . . . 'The Saysbrook bank robbers have not as yet been apprehended.'"

Allen snorted. "Don't say it. Sure, it's gossip. But gossip items like that are the backbone of every country newspaper. That's why folks buy 'em."

"You're right on that point, Allen," Kendall agreed. "But you've got to dig farther than gossip if you're going to put a weekly across these days. Got to get behind the gossip."

"Meaning that there's a lot more news in this town than you fellows are getting. You've got to keep your eyes open. Beat the dailies. Give your readers something to read."

"Sounds easy. You show me."

"That's what I'm here for. When do your forms close for this week's issue?"

"Tomorrow noon."

"Good. I'll have a live-wire story for you by then."

Kendall picked up his hat. "If I can do it, you can do it. You're known hereabouts. That fair enough?"

"Seeing's believing, young fellow."

Kendall went out. At 9:30 the next morning he was back. Allen, who had been a little worried, looked up anxiously.

"Got your story?"

"Sure. And I've got your bank robber."

"What bank robber?"

"The guy who robbed the Saysbrook bank. I saw a news item on your galley proof yesterday."

Allen looked incredulous. "Mean to say you captured him?"

"That's right. And the story's all yours. So hop to it on that type-writer. And run off a thousand extras this week. You'll sell 'em all."

Allen swallowed. Things were happening a little too fast.

"Listen," said Kendall patiently. "Yesterday when I drove into town I saw a man painting a house. The house looked as if it hadn't been painted for half a century. Then I saw your news item about it. How could a man afford to have his house painted after 50 years, if he couldn't before then? Especially in these times? Well, the bank had been robbed at Saysbrook, hadn't it? I began thinking. I looked up this Caleb Rollins guy. Sure enough, he wasn't any particular credit to the town. I talked with him. He seemed to have plenty of money, but no particular intelligence. I accused him of the robbery and he wilted. That's the whole story. The local constable promised to keep it quiet until we got the paper out."

Allen's jaw sagged. He couldn't believe it until Constable Layton hove into the office and verified the tale with shining eyes. Then he wrote the story.

Kendall went through the books. By the time the press was running he had jotted down a list of suggestions for Allen to refer to at such times as business was slack. Then he picked up his hat.

"Well, so long, Allen. I'm leaving." He glanced about the office. It had been swept clean and had an ordered look.

"Going? Going where?" Allen had risen.

"Home. No need of me here. Showed you how, didn't I?"

"Yes, but—"

"Never mind the 'buts,' Allen. Just dig in behind the gossip items and you'll find news. And when your next report comes through you'll be out of the red."

He turned and stepped into the street, started briskly away toward the railroad station. Behind him Allen stood and watched the retreating figure. He caught himself wondering just what had taken place in his office during the past 24 hours. He had a feeling that whatever it was, it was for the best. But it wasn't until after the Gazette was on the street and two thousand extra copies had been sold that he was ready to admit his twenty years of experience was something to forget rather than remember.

Why He Married Susie?

Here is a man's idea of why it is so often a shock to meet the wife of a likable, intelligent, and highly successful man—the kind of man that other men both like and admire.

"A man, when he is 20 or 25, falls in love with Susie. Susie is pretty. She is even a nice, sweet girl. The man marries her, never, of course, stopping to wonder what Susie will be like at 40.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Johnson of California visited Mr. and Mrs. Anton Benson this week. Mr. Johnson is the brother of Mrs. Benson. This was quite a surprise, as the air mail sent them did not come until after the Johnsons arrived. It was a hurried to Wash, Penn., due to Mrs. Johnson's father being in a serious auto wreck. Mr. Johnson had not seen Mr. Benson for 41 years and the latter did not recognize Mr. Johnson, but it was a great thrill to have the visit.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCHES

"Substance" was the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, March 16.

The Golden Text was, "For ever, O Lord, thy word is settled in heaven. Thy faithfulness is unto all generations" (Psalms 119:89, 90).

Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible: "Thine, O Lord, is the greatness, and the power, and the glory, and the victory, and the majesty; for all that is in the heaven and in the earth is thine; thine is the kingdom, O Lord, and thou art exalted as head above all. Both riches and honor come of thee, and thou reignest over all; and in thine hand is power and might; and in thine hand it is to make great, and to give strength unto all" (1 Chronicles 29:11, 12).

The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "Spirit, God, has created all in and of Himself. Spirit never created matter. There is nothing in Spirit out of which matter could be made, for, as the Bible declares, without the Logos, the Aeon or Word of God, 'was not anything made that was made.' Spirit is the only substance, the invisible and indivisible infinite God. Things spiritual and eternal are substantial. Things material and temporal are insubstantial" (p. 353).

DETACHABLE, NEW, AUTOMATIC GAS HOUSE-HEATER

Does Away with Spring and Fall Furnace Fire-Building

BEFORE

Teeter-totter temperatures

Chilly spring days call for a fire—so down to the basement you go with paper and kindling—ready to heap on fuel.

Whoops . . . hot weather again. And there you are with a blazing furnace fire. Well, nothing to do but let the fire burn itself out.

What! Yes, now that the furnace is out, the weather turns cool again. So down you go once more to start up the fire. This can go on for days.

AFTER

Uniform temperature

A crisp spring day—so what do you do? Well, it takes but a minute to install this portable unit. Just fit it in the furnace door and let it provide clean, even, healthful heat.

Now the weather gets warm again. Okay, you'll not waste fuel, for the thermostat control has turned off the heat automatically—kept the house from becoming too warm.

The paper forecasts "cold tonight". Don't worry—the gas heater turns on automatically when the weather changes. No work, no worry, and uniform temperatures always!

Usable in most cases for more than half the heating season

The story of how this amazing unit operates is told in the pictures above. But here are a few more points you'll want to know about: It's light weight . . . (weighs only 12 pounds). You can attach or remove it with ease . . . no nuts, bolts or wrenches required—no pipes to disconnect. It's economical—(1) operates only when necessary; (2) takes a special low gas house-heating rate; (3) can be used as little or as much as you want. It does not interfere with your regular winter furnace operation, nor does it require any alterations to the furnace grates or fire-box. It can be used in either warm air furnace or hot water boilers.

Now, before changeable spring weather arrives get full particulars about this economical new unit. Write or phone . . .

ONLY $49.50 ready for use including automatic thermostat control.

ONLY $1.50 DOWN Balance, plus small carrying charges. Get your bill in 30 days or less. No interest.

MCCORMICK-DEERING

ACCURACY COUNTS
in Corn Planting Time

Get off to a good start with your corn planting job this spring with an accurate planter. Make sure of a good stand by choosing a planter designed for hybrid seed as well as other varieties.

Accuracy—plus a combination of many time-proved features—is built into the rugged "100 Series" of horse-drawn McCormick-Deering Corn Planters. This line, used with good seed, will plant with very close to 100% accuracy.

You can see these machines at our store now. We also have the quick-attachable, 2-row checkrow planters and drills for the Farmall 12 tractor and pull-type and direct-connected, 4-row planters and drills for the larger Farmall tractors.
